2013 ACNP Paul Hoch Distinguished Service Award

- 1. The Paul Hoch Distinguished Service Award is presented by the ACNP when a member has made unusually significant contributions to the College. The emphasis of this award is on service to the College—not for teaching, clinical, or research accomplishment. Recipients of the Hoch Award will receive a monetary award and a plaque to be given at the Annual Meeting in Hollywood, Florida, December 8-12, 2013.
2. Any Member or Fellow of the ACNP may submit the name of a member to receive the Hoch Award. All submissions shall be made to the Executive Office and include a description of the candidate’s contributions to the College and a statement about the significance of his/her contributions. Nomination of women and minorities is highly encouraged.
3. Individuals who have received the Paul Hoch Distinguished Service Award are:

Re: Hoch Award nomination

June 14, 2013

Dear Members of ACNP Council:

I nominate Dr. James Meador-Woodruff for the 2013 Paul Hoch Distinguished Service Award. Jim made unusually significant contributions to the College over a 6+ year period as Editor-in-Chief of Neuropsychopharmacology. He is an ideal candidate for this prestigious award.

Jim took over Neuropsychopharmacology in 2006, during a time of crisis for the journal. As was justified by the circumstances, he brought in an entirely new team of editors and re-established stability and transparency. Despite these challenges, under his leadership the journal has become one of the top journals in our field. He grew the impact factor from 3.80 in 2006 to 7.991—currently the high point in journal history and #6 among all psychiatry journals—in 2011. (The 2012 impact factor is not yet available.) As one of his associate editors for 6 years, I can attest to the fact that he had extraordinary attention to detail and treated everyone involved in the process (authors, reviewers, editors) with a combination of respect and dignity. His decisiveness, fairness, and broad knowledge of the field made him an ideal Editor-in-Chief. I am very proud to have been part of the journal renaissance that he engineered.

I will be forever grateful to Jim for getting me interested and excited about the journal and giving me the confidence to apply for the role of Editor-in-Chief when it became open at the end of his 6-year term. Jim handed me the reins of a journal that is clearly on the rise, with improvements in numerous key metrics under his leadership. He has been gracious in every respect, sharing with me the smallest details of how to run a successful journal in a highly competitive field while leaving time and energy for my other job (running an externally funded basic research program). The fact that Jim shared so much of his time and insight during the transition made it possible to rapidly implement some significant changes in the first issue of 2013, without having to dedicate time and effort re-inventing the task of running the journal. In this way the transition was seamless, with no hurdles to slow down our progress or disrupt our trajectory.

Although my nomination focuses on Jim's role as Editor-in-Chief, it may be relevant to point out some other accomplishments that illustrate his innovating thinking on behalf of the college. Jim was also the ACNP's first website editor. He led the effort to put the 4th and 5th Generations of Progress on the website, making them available free of charge. Under his leadership the ACNP began posting the final accepted draft of papers to be published in the journal on our website within a couple of days of acceptance, essentially the same as our publisher (Nature Publishing Group [NPG]) does for us now, over 10 years ago. While we stopped this process when NPG's system became efficient enough that there was little advantage to have the draft paper available, the point is that Jim's vision was prophetic. The website has certainly been developed much further under Dave Sibley's leadership, but Jim did an outstanding job getting it off the ground at a time when there were many technical challenges and demands.

All of Jim's actions as Editor-in-Chief were designed to strengthen the journal, to support his colleagues who would be staying on, and to bring pride to the ACNP. I suspect that Jim might say that someone else deserves this award more than he does, which is precisely why he deserves it so richly. Thank you in advance for your careful consideration of this nomination.

Sincerely yours,
